

Abstract 003

Granulomas in Chronic Granulomatous Disease and Response to Steroids

Anmol Goyal, Ira Shah

Pediatric TB Clinic, B.J.Wadia Hospital for Children, Mumbai, India

Address for Correspondence: Dr Ira Shah, Levioza Health Care, 101/Pushpanjali Building, Near Danabhai Jewellers, S.V.Road, Santacruz (W), Mumbai – 400054.

Keywords: Chronic granulomatous disease, CGD, steroids

Abstract: Chronic granulomatous disease (CGD) is a rare immunodeficiency disorder which renders an individual more susceptible to bacterial and fungal infections and prone to life threatening granulomas. We report a 3 year old boy with CGD with non-resolving pneumonia and mediastinal nodes not responding to antimicrobial therapy. He had dramatic response on implementation of steroids with regression of granulomas.